MARRIED AT BERKELEY.

Miss Myrtle Striker of Berkeley and Wm. C. Lyon, formerly of Berkeley and now of Honolulu, were married on August 29th.

Miss Striker is known among a host of friends as "Bonnie," a pet name which has almost usurped her own name. She is a graduate of the Berkeley High School, where she met her prospective husband when the two were classmates. Her father has been for sixteen years a prominent figure in town and county Republican politics, serving in the party organization as well as in public offices, including that of Town Marshal and Deputy Sheriff, and in the Street Department.

William Lyon is a rising young business man in the Hawaiian Islands. The Lyon family have recently moved to the Islands and they, with the young people recently married, will make Honolulu their home.

Funston, both being entertained by the Officers' Club.

The engagement is announced of Miss Mary Widdfield, daughter of Mrs. Mary Widdfield of Hassinger street, to Lieut. H. P. Wilber, U. S. A. Miss Widdfield belongs to a prominent family in Honolulu and is a society belle of fine social qualities and charm of person. She has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Howell, at Fort Monroe, where she met Mr. Wilber, and has well sustained her reputation as a beauty and wit. Lieut. Harry Wilber is the son of Mr. E. P. Wilber of Bethlehem, Penn., head of a well-known and aristocratic family. The wedding will take place some time in the fall at Fort Banks, Boston, from the home of her sister, Mrs. Howell.

Miss Edna Case of Denver, who visited Mr. and Mrs. Byron Baird several months this year, is shortly to be married to Mr. Albert McEvein, a wealthy Pittsburger. Their honeymoon will be spent in the Orient. It is the intention of the couple to visit Honolulu on the way to the Far East.

A., nephew of the President, and Miss Egbert, daughter of the late Col. Egbert. Covers were laid for eight guests. MRS. J. Q. WOOD RECEIVES A DISTINGUISHED HONOR

Mrs. J. Q. Wood, known to the lyric stage of Italy as "La Godard," is making a sensation in grand opera at La Scala, Milan. Her husband, Mr. Wood, was formerly a teacher at Punahou.

Italian musical papers have much to say of "La Godard" in the strain of the following which is translated from the Salsomaggiore of July 5th. Mrs. Wood has been engaged as soprano prima donna at La Scala, which is the greatest honor that Italy can pay an artist.

"Theater Ferrario.—The salient points in the theatrical crown of this summer are two: the evening of Signora Godard in 'La Traviata,' and the first appearance of the company of Cavalier Emilio Zago."

"Let us return to 'La Traviata' and Signora Godard. This very pretty artist has achieved in her evening of honor, a very great success, in which the tenor Parola was worthy company for her."

"Signora Godard is not only a very skillful singer, but an artist whose treasure of a voice is added to a singular efficiency of scenic action. Thus Signora Godard renders the poetical, sad role of the idiotic sinner of Dumas much more effectively than necessary in one operatic scene—let us repeat, to a singular pitch of dramatic action."

"But if this constitutes a noteworthy excellence in action which ought necessarily to accompany the music and give to it a living and colored human feeling, Signora Godard possesses also another very great quality, that of an ecstatic, flowing and flexible voice. 'It seems useless to us to record every single applause merited by the pretty artist in her evening of honor. The bursts of applause were many and convincing, and encores were not lacking. Some splendid flowers were bestowed upon the songstress of the evening.'"

The "Chisciotte" of Salsomaggiore, on June 23th:

"Tuesday we were able to have the first night of 'La Traviata.' The auditorium of the Ferrario, literally jammed, presented the appearance of a great event. All the intellectual people of Salsomaggiore were in the theater, where were also gathered the tenor Borgatti, Fernando De Lucia, the songstresses Pandolfini, Elisa Bruno and De Marchi, and Signor Di Benedetto, and I do not know how many other great stars of our lyric stage."

"The prelude to the opera aroused at once the first hearty applause for the tenor Parola. The duet that followed between Parola and Signora Godard revealed at once in Godard an artist of the greatest talent. Enrichetta Godard (Henrietta Godard) is a young American lady with great expressive eyes, and a slender face beautiful in the true sense of the word. But this description cannot fully express her art. Enrichetta Godard sings not only according to the best school, not alone possesses a voice flexible and pleasing through all the tones of the scale, but a voice in which rhythm is felt from the lowest to the highest tones. And this is not enough; she also feels her music and knows very well how to color her singing, combining mimicry and stage effect with great skill. The end of the first act closed with great applause for Godard. Signora Godard was obliged to repeat the end of the first act; other requests for encores were impossible to grant."

"The fourth act is all a triumph for Godard. This very intelligent artist knows how, in a touching scene, to give such a human, tragic and natural tone to her voice, that the public has many times greeted the sympathetic artist with ovations."

"She puts tears into her voice and without contortions, without being too greatly convulsed or rolling her eyes, and knows how to modulate her voice to the gasps of the sick woman, cries of desperation and groaning from agony."

"This appearance in opera crowns her. The choruses were good, the orchestra was excellent, and the soloist of the orchestra, Nastrucci, as first violinist, had to repeat the prelude to the fourth act. And even the stage scenery was good."

"La Traviata" was repeated the following evenings with growing success."
